NAPANEE'S NEW BUILDING BY-LAW

The following extracts from the town's Building By-law will be of interest to all residents of the town:

1. That owners or other persons shall make application in writing to and secure permits from the Municipal Council of the Town of Napanee to make repairs, alterations, or renewals of walls or roofs of existing buildings or to construct any new buildings within this district bounded by the following limits, commencing at the corner of Bridge and Robert streets thence along Bridge street to Adelphi street, thence along Adelphi to Dundas street, thence along both sides of Lundas street to East street, thence from the corner of Dundas and East streets to Mill street, thence along Mill street to Robert street, thence along Robert street to Bridge street.

2. That plans of the said showing the proposed site of any new building, verandah or garage in the residential district which is described in the preceding clause 9 of this by-law or of alterations to buildings, verandahs or garages already constructed, be presented from the Municipal Council of the Town of Napanee and a building permit shall be secured from the said Council or officer appointed by them before any new building, verandah or garage shall be commenced or alterations made to the buildings, verandahs or garages that were erected at the time of the passing of this by-law.

3. That within the corporate limits of the Town of Napanee and being within that part of the residential district known as residential district as hereinafter defined no building shall be erected nearer the street line than sixty feet, provided, however, that the Council may by resolution when application in writing has been made by the owner in behalf of any property included in the residential district hereinbefore imposed in cases where the grade or the condition of the lot or the location of any existing building on any adjacent lot may make it advisable to so modify said restriction, provided further that no said building be used for the purpose of a garage it shall not be placed nearer the street line than sixty feet.

4. That no public garage (a building where cars are stored for sale or repairs or where gasoline is sold) shall be erected, maintained or operated in the residential district hereinafter defined, nor shall any building already erected be used after the passing of this by-law as a public garage.

5. In every case where a garage is constructed in said residential district the position of the garage shall be subject to the approval of the Council and shall not be erected until a permit has been obtained and the Council may in its discretion refuse such permit altogether.

6. No owner or other person shall erect any building, verandah or steps in the said residential district on any plot of land at a less distance than ten feet from either of the side lines of said plot of land, within a distance of forty feet from the street frontage line, provided, however, that in no event shall any building, verandah or steps hereafter to be built, be erected at a less distance than twenty feet from any adjoining building, within a distance of forty feet from the street frontage line.

7. No one shall be permitted to build a three or over three dwelling tenement in the residential district hereinafter described.

8. No dwelling shall be erected in the residential district hereinafter defined on any plot of land having a frontage of less than forty-five feet and a depth of less than ninety feet.

9. The residential district in the Town of Napanee for the purpose of this by-law shall be all that portion of the corporation limits except those portions hereinafter defined as shop, store and manufacturing districts.

10. The shop, store and manufacturing districts in the Town of Napanee, for the purpose of this by-law shall be as follows:

(a) That section in the north easterly part of the town bounded on the west by western limits of corporation, on the south by the southern boundary of G.T.R. lands as far as the south west corner of the Farmers' Dairy lands, thence following the southern boundary of these lands in an easterly direction to the Newburgh road and a continuation of this line in the same direction to the Napanee river.

(b) All that part of the Corporation limits lying westerly of Centre street and north of Isabella street.

(c) Dundas street on both sides thereof from West street easterly to a blacksmith's shop on the north side of Dundas street in the mill reserve now occupied by Thomas Huffman and on both sides of said street within the limits hereinbefore defined.

(d) East street on both sides thereof from Bridge street southerly to Water street.

(e) John street on both sides thereof from Bridge street southerly to Mill street.

(f) Centre street on both sides thereof from Bridge street southerly to Water street.

(g) Both sides of the Market Square.

(h) All that portion of the corporation limits not hereinbefore included in paragraph 10 of this by-law bounded on the east by Centre street, on the north by Water street, on the south by the Napanee river and on the west by the Municipal limits.

BASKETBALL

It was an unusually large and enthusiastic crowd at the Armouries, Saturday night, who witnessed the double victory of the N. C. I. basketball teams over the Belleville visitors. By defeating the B. H. S. Seniors, Napanee practically clinched the Bay of Quinte championship. The final play-off will be in Kingston, at the Queen's Gymn., on Saturday, December 16th.

The first half held few interesting points, ending with a score in favor of Belleville of 7-4. However, Napanee was determined to win and went back to the field intent on showing a little more life and to hold back Belleville from obtaining the Cup. This last period provided the audience with the fastest battle of the season.

Belleville's combination proved ineffective on so large a court, but their aggressive defence kept the Napanee forwards busy. Consequently the score was low. Belleville making but one penalty basket throughout the half and Napanee winning by a close margin, 10-8.

The Junior game was also full of interest, but the brilliant combination of the speedy home team kept Napanee in the lead from start to finish. The closing score was 13-3.

Napanee fans may well be proud of the score the N.C.I. girls have made this year, for they have been a credit to the sport, and going to the play-off carry with them the wishes of all good sportsmen.

The line-up was as follows:

Seniors—Forwards, Mildred Perry, Marion Roblin; defence, Edna Vankoughnet; Alma Wales; Centres, Winnifred Perry, Captain, Beatrice Perry.

Juniors—Forwards Yvonne McGraw, Kathryn O'Ray; Centres, Kate Gallagher, Helen Davy; Defence, Geneva Roblin, Capt., Lillian Birchall, Defences, Miss Helen Grange, Napanee, Miss Merry, Belleville; Napanee Coach, Mr. C. B. Smith.

VOTE SCHEDULE DECLINES SAT., DEC. 9

GET EVERY SUBSCRIPTION YOU CAN

Campaign arousing great interest—Chevrofet car yet to be won—Highest vote for remaining part of drive offered now—Few subscriptions will win prizes.

Give The Express For Christmas Presents

A present that will be appreciated by all—Don't allow the coupons to go to waste—Clip it out and see some contestant gets the benefit.

VOTE OFFER FOR THIS WEEK

Besides the regular vote 360,000 extra votes will be issued for a club of $12.00 in paid subscriptions or $180.00 for $6.00. The offer is good for just one week, closing Saturday night, December 9th, 1922. The Free Voting Coupons are good for 9,000 votes this week.

The big Circulation Drive for The Express is waxing warm so to speak and many of the contestants are playing an even race and the Chevrolet car is yet to be won. The votes offered this week is the highest that will be offered again during the drive, which offers big opportunities for those who take advantage of the same. There will be a drop in votes after every Saturday night during the remaining weeks of the drive and those who get the higher vote at this time are going to be the winners.

The payment of subscriptions at this time is no easy task to accomplish, many excuses being given for not "Paying now", but those who wish to give their favored contestant the benefit of the big vote offered for the week, will pay this week. On account of the large number taking part in the drive necessarily makes it very difficult to secure a number of paid subscribers but those who do manage to get one or more are going to be the prize winners and get the cash awards.

"So near to Christmas" is another good excuse, but what could be better for a Christmas gift than to give a one year's subscription to "Dad" or some others member of the family or to a relative or friend. Think it over and pay your subscription this week. Are you saving the coupons in your paper? It is worth the money to some one. Clip it out and send or bring it to the Express office or give it to the contestant who you would like to help with a greater vote.

Miss Luella Garrison, Kingston, spent Sunday last with her parents.

DESERONTO.

Mrs. Maud Woodcock was taken before Magistrate Bedford on Friday, by Chief of Police William Bowen, on a charge of theft of rings, cuff links, clothing, etc., from Mrs. Beak, of Napanee. After a preliminary hearing Mrs. Woodcock was remanded till Wednesday and is now in jail awaiting trial. In the juvenile court, presided over by Magistrate Bedford, on Friday, a boy was fined $5.00 and costs for defacing a bill board.

Parish Hall witnessed the largest gathering that has yet attended the weekly social functions since the beginning of the enjoyable events. The euchre and dance Friday night was the last till after Advent which will terminate at Christmas. After that they will be resumed. Houle's orchestra was present and furnished delightful music for the occasion and the entire large assembly seemed to enjoy themselves no meter before.

White Hall, Mill street, was the scene of a swell gathering on Friday evening, the members of which enjoyed themselves from eight till ten in progressive euchre. In this event Mrs. Wm. H. Harvey won the lady's prize, and Mr. Smith the gentleman's. After a dainty lunch, dancing prevailed till midnight to most excellent music furnished by Mr. Eppes and Mrs. Harold Watson. The social function was given under the auspices of the Women's Citizens' League and after Christmas the League will sponsor a like assembly in the hall every month.

The crew of the boat, Quinte Lady which is now used in picking up the fish caught around the bay, with Captain Howard Burnip and Engineer Fred Cummings in charge, are all shaking hands with themselves that they went ashore Friday evening to tell the story. The extreme high wind that prevailed over the bay Friday and coming from the direction that gave it a full sweep [illegible] bay became a mountain of water and the boat was buffeted by the huge waves and wind till she turned turtled, one side thrown high. Captain from the wheel and flooring the engineer till all hands thought the end had come. Water poured into the boat at a lively rate. However, all at once the boat righted itself by some miraculous force and after two hours battle with the elements was brought into her dock with about three feet of water in her hold, and minus a good part of her cargo of fish that was thrown through the openings by the force of the rolling of the boat.

Thomas G. McWain, Deseronto, has announced his intention to run for the township. There are plenty of indications that the municipal election campaign this year will be a warm one.

On Nov. 22nd there passed away at her home, near Newburgh, a much respected woman in the person of Mrs. George Thompson, aged fifty-eight years, whose maiden name was Miss Mary Bradshaw. Besides her husband she leaves seven daughters and one son, and two sisters, Mrs. John Jaynes, of Kingsford, and Mrs. Sharpe, who lives near Belleville. The brothers who survive are David Bradshaw, Deseronto; Martin, Selby and John, Roblin. Mrs. Thompson was till only a few days from an affection of the heart.

Thursday Morning.

Rev. A. J. Wilson and Mr. W. S. Herrington, K.C., appeared before the Council, asking assistance for the Lennox and Addington Historical Society. The Society has expended all its funds in the publication of their book on the war work of Lennox and Addington, and still owe $500.00, and they ask the County to make a grant of this amount to assist the Society in their work.

A vote of thanks was tendered the deputation for their clear exposition of the work of the Society.

On motion the request of the Historical Society was referred to the Finance Committee.

The following accounts were ordered paid:—

Mingé & Hambly, re Babcock, $25.00; E. J. Pollard, printing, $122.05; Children's Aid Society, $36.60; F. Kinkley, County Property, $15.00; Belleville High School, $86.91; J. A. Morrison, supplies, $2.50; Belleville Children's Shelter, $110.00; Belleville Children's Shelter, $52.00.

On motion the Village of Newburgh was granted $242.15, and the Village of Bath $182.57, on County Road account, to be charged to their 1923 appropriations.

Friday Morning.

Mr. Kellar moved, seconded by Mr. Young, that the motion making special grants to Bath and Amherst Island Continuation Schools, be reconsidered. Motion carried.

Mr. Kellar moved, seconded by Mr. Young, that the motion making above grants, be rescinded. Motion carried.

Yeas and nays on above motion were asked for by Mr. Miller.

Yeas—Messrs. Campbell, Fisher, Hannah, Kellar, Loyst, McNeely, Smith, Young, Milling—9.

Nays—Messrs. Elliott, Johnston, Mellow, Miller, Paul, Rodgers—6.

Moved by Mr. Elliott, seconded by Mr. Kellar, that this Council recommend to the Council of 1923 the consideration of a grant to the Northern Ontario Fire Relief Committee.

The first report of the Finance Committee was presented, recommending a grant of $200.00 to the Lennox and Addington Historical Society, payable in 1923. Referred to the Council of 1923 for consideration.

The Secretary of the Lennox Women's Institutes reported five Institutes in active operation, and asked the usual grant of $15.00 for each, also that Enterprise and Amherst Island Women's Institutes receive a like amount.

On motion above grants were ordered paid.

A By-law covering the charge of County Roads in Camden, was passed and ordered submitted to the Highways Department for approval.

The Warden was granted a special sum of $50.00 for expenses; also the usual grant of $25.00.

The Council extended to the esteemed Warden, Mr. Hannah, its thanks for his extreme courtesy while discharging his duties in the chair. The Council desired to record its appreciation not only of his many sterling social qualities but also his far-sighted and accurate vision of the manifold needs of this County, and it is hoped he will continue to lend his services to the advancement of the interest of the County.

PARLIAMENTARY LETTER

Sir Henry Thornton, now head of the Canadian National Railways, arrived last week to take over the duties of his new position. Sir Henry landed at New York on Tuesday and came right to Ottawa. Temporary offices are being fitted up for him here and he will make his headquarters in the capital at least until such time as the board decides where the permanent headquarters are to be located.

One of the important announcements of the week has been that of Hon. Chas. Stewart, Minister of the Interior, in regard to immigration plans:

"I think I am justified in believing that the whole agricultural outlook justifies a more optimistic note than has for some time prevailed." Mr. Stewart stated, "slowly but surely costs of production are going down and there is every prospect that in the almost immediate future agriculture in Canada will be restored to its former healthy condition. Even with the lure of the free homestead largely removed Canada is in a pre-eminent position in its ability to offer fertile and productive lands at a lower price than any other country in the world. Cheap and fertile lands convenient to railways, and with an era of agricultural prosperity seasonably within view, Canada can confidently invite settlers from other lands to take advantage of the opportunities which she offers.

"In order to assist as much as possible we are bringing our immigration Agents in the Western States to Canada to meet a buyer and to list desirable farms which the owners will rent for a year or two in the hope that the renter may eventually purchase and become the owner. This is something that has not before been attempted in the way of immigration work by our agents. The assistance given by the various colonization interests will enable the Government to concentrate its efforts on tenant farmers and agricultural workers who may be induced to come to Canada. As a commencement it is our intention to greatly increase our publicity and advertising activities, concentrating our efforts in Great Britain, the Scandinavian countries, Holland, Belgium, France and the United States.

"Increased efforts will be made to secure a much larger number of women household workers, the need for which is quite apparent both in rural and urban centres, and great care will be taken to see that such women are selected and placed in the proper environment.

"Our attention has also been directed to a very promising field for securing immigration to Canada, namely: That of the orphan children, many of them dependants of ex-soldiers in Great Britain. A careful survey has been made of this field and there would appear to be at present very great possibilities. In looking into the question of placing them in Canada, the Government feels that five or six thousand of these children could be placed annually.

"It has been decided to approach the British Empire Settlement Board for the purpose of ascertaining if they will join the Canadian Government in paying the passages of these five thousand-odd children it is proposed to establish in Canada. I look with a great deal of confidence upon this particular branch of our immigration work. There is no question—the records kept through many years demonstrate it beyond all doubt—that those who come to our shores as children, grow up, finally as Canadians. Where proper selection is applied at the source they become almost invariably good citizens.

Faking Automobiles.

Remarkable tricks are practised by unscrupulous dealers in second-hand automobiles.

They employ all kinds of devices to make an old and worn-out machine appear new and in good condition to the person to whom they hope to sell it.

If the electric lighting set is worn out they place an empty cigar-lit packet beneath the brushes. This makes a temporary contact, and for a short time the lights work as well as ever.

When the gearbox is suffering from old age they fill it with sawdust. This deadens the noise, and unless the customer inspects it closely there is nothing to show that he is not buying a new and undamaged car. The cure only lasts for an hour or so.

If the ball-bearings are worn the space is filled with thick grease which is kept in with cardboard washers. In the same way a loose steering wheel may be made tight.

Everything depends on the driver who takes the customer out for a trial run. It is a race against time, for if the car is kept out too long the old faults will reappear, and there will be no sale.

DAIRY PRODUCTS.

Their Value in Promoting Physical and Mental Well-being of Both Child and Adult.

"Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap," was the text that Miss Helen G. Campbell of the Dominion Dairy and Cold Storage Branch, selected on which to found a recent address in which she undertook to prove that Dairying was Everybody's Business. The speaker explained that it was not her intention to deliver a sermon, but, as a matter of fact, she delivered a homily so full of truths calculated to benefit and inspire the hearers that it might have been given voice in any edifice, sacred or secular.

One of these truths that came out early in the address, and which every parent should pay heed to, was that to train a child in good food habits is one of the fundamentals in making him or her a success in life. In her address, Miss Campbell then proceeded to describe the various virtues that dairy products possess, not alone in body-building and mental development, but also in promoting capability of accomplishing big things. She traced plant life through absorption by the cow to the making of milk and cream and thence to butter and cheese, which all contained that element necessary to every form of life, namely vitamines. In our climate, she said, where home-grown green vegetables were not obtainable at all seasons, we must depend to a large extent on our dairy products, and implied that the more we depended the better health we should enjoy. She quoted Metchnikoff in proof of the assertion that milk promoted longevity, and Dr. Woods Hutchinson, the widely-known scientist, as saying in advocacy of the greater consumption of dairy products, that their extension in use was the first and most important principle, and that "the basis of preventive dentistry is satisfactory nutrition during development"; in other words, that the consuming of dairy products leads to good teeth. Scientists maintained, said the speaker, that we should use at least a quart of milk a day either as a drink or in some form of food. The ordinary Canadian diet was apt to be lacking in sufficient lime, and milk supplied this substance in great or quantity that any other common food. Lime was important to both mother and child. Having pointed out how business men and women profited by the plentiful use of dairy products in the promotion of their own health and that of their employees, Miss Campbell declared that she sometimes thought that commercial and professional men, in their down-town lunch at least, are more faithful followers of the doctrine "drink milk" than any other class of people. In her closing passages the lady referred in terms of praise to the distribution of milks in schools and to the welfare work of the Home and School Clubs of the Border Cities.

The Terrible North.

Telling of terrific winds in the Arctic regions, north of the Siberian coast, and the worst ice conditions in twenty-five years, Captain Joseph Bernard, with his schooner Teddy Bear, has returned to civilization after failing to reach Wrangel Island to bring out the party headed by Allan R. Crawford, of Toronto, sent there last year by Vilhjalmur Stefansson to hold the island for Canada. Sailing from Nome on August 20, the Teddy Bear reached East Cape four days later, and by August 28 had forced a passage through to Cape Yankarem. There, Captain Bernard met the schooner Amy, southbound, which reported the Chukotak, the Silver Wave and the Blue Sea all frozen in the ice, fifteen miles from Yankarem Cape.

The schooners Polar Bear and Eagle were also reported wrecked by the ice, the latter about twenty-five miles south of North Cape. The crews were rescued, but both vessels are a total loss. Captain C. K. Larson, of the Amy, strongly advised Captain Bernard to return to Nome, as, in his view, it would be impossible for the Teddy Bear to reach Wrangel Island.

NOW DO MY WORK WITH EASE

Because Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored My Health

Hornell, N. Y.—"I was in bad health but there didn't seem to be any one thing the matter with me. I was tired out all over and it was an effort for me to move. I was irritable and could not sleep nights and had trouble with my bowels and at my periods. It seemed that nearly every one around me knew of your medicine and wanted me to try it, so at last I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Tablets and Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine and improved every day. I do all my own work now except the washing and do it with ease. I can accomplish as much in a day now as it would have taken me a week to do last winter and I try to get every one I know to take your medicine to build them up. You are welcome to use this letter as a testimonial if you like."—Mrs. CHAS. BAKER, 21 Spencer Ave., Hornell, N.Y.

In almost every neighborhood there are women who know of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. They know because they have taken it and have been helped. Why don't you give it a trial?

The Warden's Supper.

On Thursday evening, at the Campbell House, Warden Hannah, entertained the members of the County Council, the county officials, the clergy, members of the legal fraternity and friends to the annual warden's supper. The dinner served up by Mr. Wallace and Campbell House staff was all that could be desired, though the smallness of the dining-room necessitated some of the guests waiting for a second table. Following the dinner Rev. A. L. McTear, of Bath, gave a short address, which was listened to attentively and highly appreciated. Warden Hannah then welcomed his guests in a few words. W. W. Herrington, K. C., gave his lecture on "A trip Through Mexico," illustrated with colored lantern slides. Community singing and music supplied by Walters' orchestra filled in a nice evening's programme, and the guests dispersed thanking Mr. Hannah for a splendid evening's entertainment.

Death at Enterprise.

There passed away at his home on Nov. 14th, an old and life-long resident of this vicinity in the person of John Kelly, at the ripe old age of eighty-five years. Thy deceased had been in failing health for the past three years, but was greatly blessed in his last days for suffering was absent except that caused by the weakness of advanced age. The late Mr. Kelly was born in the county of Wicklow, Ireland, and came to Canada with his parents at the age of four years, and settled in the township of Camden. The funeral took place on Thursday morning, Nov. 16th, to the Roman Catholic church, where a solemn requiem mass was sung for the repose of his soul, by the Rev. Fr. Farrell, after which the remains were interred in the family plot. He leaves to mourn his loss a loving wife, six sons and three daughters, Bernard and Joseph, Port Arthur; George, Tamworth; Michael, Patrick and Thomas at home; Mrs. Thomas Quigley, Toronto; Mrs. John McKena, Smith's Falls, and Mrs. John Dowling, Enterprise.

The water in the Napanee river had a light scum of ice on it on Saturday.

A Great Success.

The annual tea held in the Church Woman's Guild of St. Mary Magdalene's Church, occupied the Town Hall on Friday and Saturday. A thriving business was done by the ladies in charge of the various tables on fancy work, aprons, arts and crafts and cooked food. The attractive candy table and the afternoon tea added to the social enjoyment. The receipts, at the time of writing are reported to be nearly $1000.00 with more to come. On Friday evening an entertainment was presented. Miss M. Stevens gave a very acceptable piano solo, and Mrs. Powell contributed one of her charming readings. Some little girls trained by Mrs. Powell, then assisted Miss Ruetie Dalton to exhibit a "Scene from Fairyland." Miss Dalton is a very graceful dancer, and this number was enthusiastically received. The chief feature of the programme was Mr. W. S. Herrington's lecture on "Glimpses of Europe," illustrated by many fine lantern slides, and presented in his usual effective and vivid manner.

RUPTURE IS DANGEROUS

Don't always be compelled to wear a truss and don't live in despair. If you are troubled with rupture you can be restored to soundness in your own home without operation or danger. Anyone ruptured, man, woman or child, should use Thompson's Renowned Rupture Remedy. It softens the calloused edges of the broken lining and puts it in a healthy, growing condition so that the opening may close naturally. Thompson's Renowned Rupture Remedy is really a wonderful discovery and wonderful results will be obtained from its use. It is guaranteed to give relief provided directions are accurately followed. If satisfactory results are not obtained the purchase price will be refunded. A full sized bottle contains a three months treatment which is sufficient in most cases. Mailed to any address in Canada upon receipt of $5.00. Send money order or marked cheque. Do not send money in letter without registering.

Three Years "Over There" Two With "The Mounties"

Sitting astride a "Mountie's" horse he was as fine a specimen of manhood as one could meet. Six feet tall, broad-shouldered and keen, he made an athlete of no mean ability. Three years in the war had seemingly made "a man out of him," but it took a bad cold to show that the war had far-reaching and terrible effects.

One day he played and worked hard, then went for a dip in the lake. A little cold came on, then got worse and worse and finally—consumption. His three years "Over there," and two spent in the "Mounties," have given him a fighting spirit.

During these last eight months the foe has not killed his hope; he's still hoping that God's fresh air and man's skill at the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives can retain something of his old manhood for active service yet.

Only with the help of many warm friends can this great work be carried on. Money is urgently needed. Contributions may be sent to Hon. W. A. Charlton, 225 College Street, Toronto.

Herring are finally entering the Bay of Quinte, that is the latest word from the lower end of the bay. The government spawners have been notified of the fact and have prepared for spawning operations. Fishermen are having a fair catch of the fish now. Catches are mixed, there being a number of pike, pickerel, salmon trout, white fish and suckers in the hauls. These fish are worth double to the fishermen that herring are.

Improvements to County Buildings.

Since last session of the County Council the County Property Committee have made numerous improvements in the offices and Council Chamber. The judges' chambers have been moved across the hall and refitted. Boy Scout Concert at Odessa a Great Success.

Thursday last the new troop of Boy Scouts at Odessa held a concert for the purpose of raising money to equip the troop. This troop of a dozen boys has only been recently organized, by Dr. Munroe, who has taken a keen interest in the work. To assist the Odessa scouts in their evening's work, Scoutmaster Hall, from Kingston, had eight of his boys there. The Kingston Scouts gave an exhibition of First Aid work, signaling work, a Boy Scout recitation by Scout Kidd, and a classic song by Scout Fair, who is one of the leading songsters in St. George's Cathedral, Kingston. Capt. Herd, secretary of the local association of Boy Scouts, Kingston, gave a short speech, telling the new troop that they were a part of the 2,000,000 Scouts that represented some thirty-five nations, and as the sun never sets on the Union Jack, so it never sets on the Boy Scout work. Dr. Munroe called on the Napanee troop, but changing this asked for an item from the Napanee regiment, as Napanee was represented by thirty Scouts, and he thought Scoutmaster Babcock had the regiment with him instead of a troop. The troop put on a short exhibition of physical drill. The Odessa troop put on a dumb bell drill, which was loudly applauded. Dr. Munroe has promised to put this drill on when Napanee holds their concert in January; also semaphore exhibition. Local talent from the citizens of Odessa helped to make the programme one of the best Odessa has heard for some time. The concert ended with a tableau, during which "Rule Britannia" and "O Canada" were sung, after which the "King" was sung. The concert over, the Odessa Scouts treated their fellow Scouts to a feed. Kingston and Napanee left before the others, as they had to get home as early as possible.

Phelps Power and Light

This is the dull season of the year—short cloudy days, and long dark nights.

The chores must be done with the lantern which is most inadequate and dangerous. Only last week a large barn and contents were burned, caused by a pigeon flying against a lantern, knocking it down.

Not so when buildings are lighted with Phelps light.

Then Phelps power will saw your wood, grind your grain, pump your water, wash your clothes, and numerous other work about the farm 365 days a year, simply by touching a button.

Coal Vessels Driven Ashore.

The schooner Lyman Davis, Capt. McCullough, loaded with coal for VanLuven, Napanee, was driven ashore on Wadmes Island. When the storm abated tugs were sent to her assistance and she arrived in Napanee on Sunday.

The schooner Katie Eccles, formerly owned by Capt. McCullough, of Napanee, had her rudder torn off during the gale, and after being at the mercy of the waves for some time drifted near shore at Timber Island. Anchors were thrown out and the vessel remained there until Wednesday evening, when she began to drag her anchors and the crew went ashore to escape being blown off shore. The schooner was blown into the lake with the gale and has not been heard from since.

Sterling Bank Won Case. -

On Thursday morning Judge H. A. Lavell gave judgment in a case which is of unusual interest brought by the Sterling Bank against two farmers living near the village of Tamworth who were members of a defunct U. F. O. organization called the Sheffield United Farmers' Club. After doing business for four years the club terminated its activities in 1921 and at that time was indebted to the bank. As it was not an incorporated body the bank brought action against two of its members who had been active in its affairs. It was impossible to bring action against the club itself which had no corporate existence. The trial was started at Tamworth last June, when it was adjourned and was completed in Napanee last week. The judgment that the defendants are liable for the amount of indebtedness with costs.

The Poultry Fair.

The Poultry Fair this year at Napanee was the most successful one yet held here. There is a considerable difference from the few tons of fowl in A. F. Smith took in when he originated the fair some twenty years ago, and over one hundred and fifteen tons which were purchased on Wednesday and Thursday last. From early Wednesday morning until late Thursday afternoon a constant stream of teams, autos, buggies and trucks, all filled with poultry arrived in town, completely filling the streets where the buyers' sheds were situated, as well as the market square. Buyers from all the leading cold storage houses of Toronto and Montreal and from Canadian Pacific Railway buyers were present, all bidding for the fowl offered. Turkeys sold at 45c., chickens 30c., ducks 30c., and fowl 23 to 28c. As many as 100 turkeys were offered by one seller.

Rifleman Ambushes Train.

HAMILTON, Dec. 4.—Some irresponsible person with a gun, who was ambushed on the side of the Mountain not far east of Weatworth street, fired several shots at the coach windows of the G. T. R. train for St. Thomas about eight o'clock Saturday night and wounded an express messenger named Lloyd Keat in the leg. Mr. Keating was not seriously hurt, and was able to finish his run.

That more serious consequences did not ensue is almost miraculous, as the passenger coach windows were well filled and several windows were shattered by bullets. The bullet which lodged in Mr. Keating's leg came through the door of the express car he was riding in.

Officials report that this is not the first time that serious mischief has been done by unknown persons in about the same locality. Police are investigating the matter.

Strike Lasts Half a Day.

PARIS, Dec. 4.—Paris' bread strike is over. Mere rattling of the army's sabres with a threat to take over the bakeries was enough to call off the strike and the bakers began turning out loaves at 1 franc 10 centimes each as the magisterial bread weight was restored. The strike was only a half holiday for the bakers, because they began Sunday night to make bread.

Two hundred of the 2,100 bakeries in the city were open today and were stormed by a good-natured crowd which had soon carried on all the bread in sight.

But there was plenty out of sight. Many bakers turned "bread bootleggers," and supplied regular customers surreptitiously by the side door methods.

Carried Nothing Contraband.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—The Cunard liner Lusitania, sunk by a German submarine in 1915 off the Irish coast, carried no guns, troops, nor explosives, but did carry 44,000 cases of ammunition, the official report of the vessel cargo made public by Judge F. Malone, collector of the port at the time, shows, according to a copyrighted story in the New York world.

The cases of ammunition, the report stated, were carried by specific permission under rulings of the Department of Commerce, in force since 1911.

Legs and Arm Mangled.

STRATFORD, Ont., Dec. 4.—Joseph Dean, of Stratford, now in General Hospital here in a critical condition as a result of an accident at New Hamburg Saturday. Dr. Dean is section foreman on the G. T. R. and was engaged at New Hamburg unloading stakes from a car when he fell beneath the wheels. Both legs and one arm were crushed, the left leg and one hand being so badly crushed that they had to be amputated.

BLAZE IN HOSPITAL.

Two Patients In Institution Were Carried to Safety.

STRATFORD, Ont., Dec. 4. — Fire from ananknown source partially destroyed "Ancrum Pine," private hospital here Sunday night, entailing ononsande of dollars damage. The blaze, which started in the attic, was discovered about 10.15 and had evidently been burning for a considerable time. Fortunately only two patients were in the institution, and they were carried to safety and later removed to the General Hospital.

While the firemen fought the flames, willing assistants succeeded in getting most of the contents of the downstairs rooms to places of safety, the fact that the street hydrant is almost half a mile away from the burning building, caused some delay, but despite this handicap, the firemen succeeded in confining the fire to the attic. The second storey and ground floor were badly damaged by water.

The institution was purchased only a few months ago by Dr. Steele, of Havistock, and had just been thoroughly renovated.

Lands In Sett Place.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—"Ned" Seymgeour, the pugnacious M. P. from Dundee, who is the brother-in-law of Winston Churchill, arrived in London, and lenged in a taxi since here. An anonymous scrap-thrower with Seymgeour's dry views has sent him a personal challenge to Surrey which Seymgeour and his wife will occupy during the sessions of the House of Commons, and also a fine automobile to take him to and from Westminster.

"I'm going to have the time of my life," says Seymgeour, although he admits he fell asleep for a while on his first day in the House while the members were being sworn in.

Cabinet Lasts Three Days.

LISBON, Dec. 4.—The new Portuguese Government, which had been in office three days, resigned Saturday after the election of a member of the Opposition as President of Parliament.

The President of the Republic has not accepted the resignation, and will not do so until he has conferred with the political leaders in Parliament.

Mayor. Clerk.

SCHEDULE "A"

MEMORANDUM OF AGREEMENT made this day of November, A.D., 1922,

Between:—

THE FARMERS' DAIRY COMPANY, LIMITED, hereinafter called the "Company" of the first part,

and

THE CORPORATION OF THE TOWN OF NAPANEE, hereinafter called the "Corporation" of the second part.

WHEREAS the Company is the owner of the lands as hereinafter described and have erected thereon certain buildings for the purpose of their business as manufacturers and otherwise, and are about to enlarge their said factory premises, and

WHEREAS the said Company desires that the said Corporation of the Town of Napanee do give to them a fixed assessment of fifteen thousand ($15,000) dollars on their business assessment excepting for the purposes of school taxation and local improvements for a period of ten years from the first of January, A.D., 1923, and

WHEREAS in order to fix the assessment of said Farmers' Dairy Company's lands as aforesaid it will be necessary to obtain the assent of the electors thereto.

NOW THEREFORE this agreement witnesseth that the said Corporation of the Town of Napanee does hereby agree with the said Farmers' Dairy Company, Limited, to fix the assessment of the lands of the said Farmers' Dairy Company, Limited, together with all buildings and erections thereon and including business assessment except for the purposes of school taxation and for local improvements, at the sum of fifteen thousand ($15,000) dollars for a period of ten years from the first of January, A.D., 1923.

The lands of the said Farmers' Dairy Company, Limited, hereinbefore referred to are as follows, namely: All and singular that certain parcel or tract of land and premises, situate, lying and being in the Township of Richmond, now in the Town of Napanee, in the County of Lennox and Addington, and Province of Ontario, and being composed of farm lot number twenty-three (23) in the second concession of the said township of Richmond, and being more particularly described as follows, that is to say: Commencing at the northerly corner of the said tract at a point on the westerly limit of the Camden Road three hundred and seventy-nine (379) feet measured northerly from the southerly corner of the Public School lot, thence westerly at right angles to the Camden Road and parrelled to the Northern Boundary of the said lot one hundred and forty-two (1042) feet more or less to the eastern limit of a road allowance leading to the Grand Trunk Railway, thence southerly along said easterly limit of said road allowance thirty-six (36) feet more or less to the northern limit of the Grand Trunk Railway right of way, thence easterly along the Grand Trunk Railway right of way one hundred and thirty (330) feet more or less to a fence running at right angles to the Camden road, thence northerly along said fence six hundred and sixty-two feet six inches (662 ft. 6 in.) to a fence forming the rear boundary of the lot of lands fronting the Camden road, thence northerly along said fence and parallel to the Camden road seventy-four feet six inches (74 ft. 6 in.), thence easterly along a fence at right angles to the Camden road one hundred and forty feet six inches (140 ft. 6 in.) to the Camden road, thence northerly along the westerly limit of the Camden road one hundred and fifty-six inches (150 ft. 6 in.) to the place of beginning, and containing by admeasurement four and six-tenths acres (4 6-10) more or less together with a right of way forty (40) feet wide in common with the said Corporation extending from east to west across the northerly limits of the lands heretofore described.

The said Corporation further agrees with the said Company to submit a by-law to the electors of the said Town of Napanee for confirmation of this agreement at the time of the holding of the next ensuing municipal election pursuant to the statutes in that behalf.

W. A. GRANGE, Clerk.

This agreement shall be construed as enuring to the benefit of and as binding upon the parties hereto their successors and assigns respectively.

In witness whereof the parties hereto have signed by their proper officers and have affixed their corporate seals.

In the presence of

The foregoing is a true copy of a proposed by-law that will be taken into consideration by the Council after the expiration of one month from the date of the first publication thereof which date was on the 5th day of December, 1922, and

Take further notice that the day and places appointed for taking the votes upon said by-law shall be at the time and places for holding the next ensuing annual municipal election, and the time and place for attending to appoint persons to attend at the various polling places, and at the final summing up of the votes shall be as hereinbefore mentioned in the by-law.

The STRANGE CASE of CAVENDISH

By RANDALL PARRISH

AUTHOR OF "THE DEVIL'S OWN" "MYLADY OF THE NORTH" ETC.

COPYRIGHT BY RANDALL PARRISH

Then leaping to her feet and strapping the ammunition belt and revolver about her waist, she stole on tiptoe to the doorway and peered out; the silent, cavernous passage was empty.

Lithely, like a young panther, she slipped out of the cell and began making down the passageway to a spot of light which she judged to be its opening. She had scarcely gone ten feet, however, before she stopped short—somewhere in the dark she heard a voice.

What was to be done? Her temples throbbed as the voices sounded nearer. Then it came home to her—why not try one of the other cells? Suiting action to the thought, she stepped quietly from the niche in the wall, moved noiselessly along its surface, and came at length to another dungeon similar to the one she had occupied, except that it had no window in its oaken door. Trembling with the bunch of keys, she took the first one around which her fingers fell and thrust it hurriedly into the lock. She struggled with it—turning it first to the left and then to the right. The footsteps were sounding nearer and nearer every minute, the voices were growing louder.

Frantic, she gave the key a final desperate twist, and as a sigh of relief escaped her lips the door swung open. Slipping through the aperture, she closed it softly after her and, panting from excitement and her exertions, turned and faced the recesses of her hiding-place.

It was black, pitch-black, except for a long ray of light that struggled in between the heavy door and its casing, but as Stella Donovan stood there in the gloom she was aware that she was not the only occupant of the cell. She crouched back, gripped in the hands of another fear, but the next moment her alarm was lessened somewhat by the sound of a soft, well-modulated voice.

"Who's that?" it said faintly.

Then followed the repeated scratching of a wet match, a flame of yellow light, which was immediately carried to a short tallow candle, and in the aura of its sickly flame Stella Donovan saw the face of a man with long, unkempt beard and feverish eyes that stared at her as though she were an apparition.

As her eyes became more accustomed to the light she saw that the stranger was a man of approximately thirty, of good robust health. His hair was sandy of color and thin, and his beard, which was of the same hue, had evidently gone untrimmed for days, perhaps weeks; yet for all of this he kept appearance, for all the strangeness of his presence there, he was a gentleman, that was plain. And as she scrutinized him Miss Donovan thought she beheld a mild similarity in the contour of the man's head, the shape of his face, the lines of his body, to the man who several weeks before, she had seen lying dead upon the floor of his rooms in the Waldron apartments.

"My God!" he cried in a high voice. "I—I thought I was seeing things. You are really a woman—and alive?"

Miss Donovan hesitated a moment before she answered, wondering whether to tell him of her narrow escape. This she decided to do.

"Alive, but only by luck," she said in a friendly voice, and then recounted the insults of Cateras, her struggle with him, and capture of his cartridge belt and revolver, and how finally she had left him bound and gagged in the adjoining cell. The man listened attentively, though his mind seemed slow to grasp details.

"But," he insisted, unable to clear his brain, "why are you here? Surely you are not one of this gang of outlaws?"

"I am a prisoner. That is true of you also, is it not?"

"Yes. I—I am a prisoner, although I do not in the least know why. When did you come?"

"Not more than two hours ago. Two men brought me across the desert from Haskell."

"I do not know how I came. I was on the platform of an observation car the last I remember," his utterance slow, as though his mind struggled with a vague memory, "talking with a gentleman whom I had met on the train. There—there must have been an accident, I think, for I never knew anything more until I woke up here."

"Do you recall the name of the man you were conversing with on the observation car?"

He pressed his hand against his forehead, a wrinkle appearing straight between his eyes.

"I've tried to remember that," he admitted regretfully, "but it doesn't quite come to me."

"Was it Benton?"

"Yes. Why, how strange! Of course, he was Edward Benton of New York. He told me he was a broker. Why, how did you know?"

"It is not so strange," she said at last, "for your disappearance is indirectly the occasion of my being here also. I believe I can even call you by name. You are Mr. Cavendish?"

"Yes," he admitted, his hands gripping the back of the bench nervously, his eyes filled with amazement. "But—but I do not know you."

"For the best of reasons," she answered smilingly, advancing and extending her hand—"because we have never met before. I am Stella Donovan—a newspaper woman. Your strange disappearance about a month ago aroused considerable interest, and I chanced to be detailed on the case. My investigations led me to visit Haskell, where unfortunately my mission became known to those who were responsible for your imprisonment here. So, to keep me quiet, I was also abducted and brought to this place."

"You—you mean it was not an accident—that I was brought here purposely?"

"Exactly; you were trailed from New York by a gang of thieves having confederates in this country. I am unable to give you all the details; but this man Benton, whom you met on the train, is a notorious gunman and gambler. His being on the same train with you was a part of a well-laid plan, and I have no doubt but what he deliberately slugged you while you two were alone on the observation platform."

"But—but," he stammered, "what was his object? Why did those people scheme to get me?"

"As I told you, Mr. Cavendish, I do not know all the details, but I think these men—one of whom is a lawyer—planned to gain possession of your fortune, possibly by means of a forged will; and, in order to accomplish this, it was necessary to get you out of the way. If either of us can escape from this place we shall be in time to foil them completely."

He sank down on the bench and buried his face in his hands, thoroughly unnerved. The girl looked at him a moment in silence, then touched his shoulder.

"Look here, Mr. Cavendish," she said firmly, "there is no use losing your nerve. Surely there must be some way of getting out of here. For one, I am going to try."

"Miss Donovan," he said with gravity, "we are in the hands of desperate men. We will have to take desperate measures to outwit them, and we will have to make desperate breaks to obtain our freedom."

The girl nodded.

"Mr. Cavendish," she said with womanly courage, "you will not find me wanting. I am ready for anything, even shooting. I do hope you're a good shot."

Cavendish smiled.

"I have had some experience," he said.

"Then," the girl added, "you had better take the revolver."

"All right then; I'll go first, and you follow as close as possible. There mustn't be the slightest sound made."

Cavendish thrust his head cautiously through the door, the revolver gripped in his hand; Miss Donovan, struggling to keep her nerves steady touched the coat of her companion fearful of being alone. The passage was dark, except for the little bars of light streaming out through the slits in the stone above the cell doors. These, however, were sufficient to convince Cavendish that no guards were in the immediate neighborhood. He felt the grip of the girl's fingers on his coat, and reached back to clasp her hand.

"All clear," he whispered. "Hurry, and let's get this door closed."

They advanced slowly, keeping closely against the wall, and testing the floor cautiously before venturing a step. A few yards plunged them into total darkness, and, although Cavendish had been conducted along there a prisoner, he retained small recollection of the nature of the passage.

Their progress was slow but silent, neither venturing to exchange speech, but with ears anxiously strained to catch the least sound. Stella was conscious of the loud beating of her heart, the slight rasping of Cavendish's feet on the rock floor. The slightest noise seemed magnified. The grade rose sharply, until it became almost a climb, yet the floor had evidently been leveled, and there were no obstructions to add to the difficulty of advance. Then the passage swerved rather sharply to the right, and Cavendish, leading, halted to peer about the corner. An instant they both remained motionless, and then, seeing and hearing nothing, she could restrain her impatience no longer.

"What is it?" she questioned. "Is there something wrong?"

He reached back and drew her closer, without answering, until her eyes also were able to look around the sharp edge of rock. Far away, it seemed a great distance up that narrow tunnel, a lantern glowed dully, the light so dim and flickering as to scarcely reveal even its immediate surroundings; yet from that distance, her eyes accustomed to the dense gloom, she could distinguish enough to quicken her breathing and cause her to clutch the sleeve of her companion.

The lantern occupied a niche in the side wall at the bottom of a flight of rude steps. Not more than a half-dozen of these were revealed, but at their foot, where the passage had been widened somewhat, extended a stone bench on which lounged two men. Even in that dim light the two were clearly Mexican.

"What shall we do?" she asked, her lips at Cavendish's ear. "We cannot pass them—they are on guard."

"I was wondering how close I could creep in before they saw me," he answered, using the same caution. "If I was only sure they were alone, and could once get the drop, we might make it."

"Even if you succeeded in overawing these two, we would have no way of securing them. An alarm would be given before we could get beyond reach. Our only hope of escape lies in getting out of here unseen."

"Yes, and before Cateras is discovered."

"Then, let's go back and try the other way out," she urged. "That opens directly into the valley and is probably not guarded. What is happening now?"

A gray gleam of light struck the steps from above, recognized instantly as a reflection of day, as though some cover and been uplifted connecting this underground labyrinth with the clear sky. A dim shadow moved athwart the illumined rocks for a brief moment, a moving shadow uncertain in its outlines, grotesque, shapeless; and then the daylight vanished as suddenly as it dawned. The two guards below came to their feet, rigid in the glow of the lantern, their faces turned upward. Then a man came slowly down the last few steps and joined them.

CHAPTER XII.

A Dangerous Prisoner.

He was tall and thin, wearing a wide cloak about his shoulders, and high hat with broad brim. Even at that distance it could be seen that his long hair was gray, and that a heavy mustache, snow-white, made more noticeable the thin features of his face. He looked at the two men closely, and his voice easily reached the ears of the listeners.

"Who posted you here?"

"Juan Cateras, senor," answered one.

"Not on my order! Dias is watching above. Did the lieutenant give you a reason?"

"The prisoners, senor."

"The prisoners? Oh, yes; those that Lacy had confined here. Well, they will not be here for long. I do not believe in prisoners, and because I do business with that dog is no reason why he is privileged to use this place to hold his victims. Where is Cateras?"

"In the valley, senor! He went back down the passage with Silva after sending us here."

"And the prisoners?"

"Occupy the two inner cells. Merodez here says one of them is a girl."

"A girl!" the tall man laughed. "That then will account for the unusual interest of Juan Cateras, and why he preferred being left in charge. A girl, hey, Merodez! You saw the witch? What sort was she?"

"An American, senor, young, and good to look at," the other man explained. "Her eyes as blue as the skies."

"Caramba! this is all pleasant enough. I will pay my respects to the lady, and there is no time like the present."

He turned away, thumbing his mustache, quite pleased with his conceit, but one of the men stopped him with a question.

"We remain here, senor?"

"Yes, you might as well," his lips smiling, "and if the Senor Cateras passes, you can tell him that I visit the fair American. It will give him joy."

The girl drew Cavendish back hurriedly, her mind working in a flash of inspiration.

"Quick," she breathed in his ear. "There is a niche where we can hide a few yards back. If he follows the other will be might pass, and not notice."

"But he goes to your cell; 'tis Pascual Mendez."

"I know, but come. He must not go there. I will tell you my plan."

They were pressed back-within the slight recess before the Mexican turned the corner, and she had hastily breathed her desperate scheme.

"It can be done," she insisted, "and there is naught else possible. Give me the revolver. Good! Be silent now."

Mendez came down the black passage evidently in rare good humor, humming a tune, with one hand pressed upon the wall to better guide his movements. The girl stood erect, the revolver gripped in one hand, the other pressing back her companion into the recess. She had lost all sense of fear in the determination to act; better risk all than surrender without a struggle. Mendez fumbled along the wall, stumbled over some slight projection and swore; another step, and his groping hand would touch her. He never took the step, but was whirled against the side wall, with the cold barrel of a revolver pressed against his cheek. A stern, sibilant whisper held him motionless.

"If you move I fire, senor; raise your hands—quick!"

He responded mechanically, too profoundly astounded to dream of resistance. It was the sound of the voice which impressed him.

"Santa Maria! A woman?"

"Yes, senor, a woman; the same you sought, but I have found you first."

A chuckled.

"A good jest surely; how came you here?"

"Not to discuss that, senor," quietly. "Nor is this to be laughed over. If you would live, do as I say. Mr. Cavendish, see if the man bears weapons."

"If You Would Live, Do as I Say."

"Only a belt with a knife."

"Keep the knife; it may come handy for some purpose. Now bind his hands with the belt. Cross your wrists, senor."

He had lost his temper, no longer deeming this a joke.

"You d——n vixen," he growled savagely. "This play will soon be done; do you know who I am?"

"The senor Pascual Mendez, but that means nothing," she answered. "This revolver will kill you as surely as any one else. Do what I say then, and talk no more—cross your wrists behind."

He did so, and Cavendish strapped the stout belt about them, winding it in and out until he had sure purchase. He drew it so tightly the fellow winced.

"It hurts, senor," she said, satisfied. "Well, to hurt you a little is better than what you planned for me. Now lead on. No, listen first. I know who you are and your power here. That is why we took this chance of making you prisoner. We are desperate; it is either your life, or ours, senor. You are an outlaw, with a price on your head, and you realize what chances one will take to escape. Now, there is just one opportunity given you to live."

"What, senorita?"

"That you accompany us down this passage into the valley as hostage. You will compel your men, if we encounter any, to furnish us horses."

"But the men may not obey. I cannot promise; Senor Cateras—"

"Senor Cateras will not be there," she interrupted sharply. "We have already seen to Senor Cateras. The others will obey you?"

"They may; I cannot promise."

"Then it will be your own loss; for if there be a shot fired, you will get either a bullet or a knife thrust. I would try no sharp tricks, Senor Mendez. Now we go on."

Mendez, smiled grimly in the dark, his mind busy. "I am to go first? and his voice assumed polite deference.

"Beside Mr. Cavendish," she replied, "and I will be behind."

"This gentleman, you mean?"

"Yes; and there is no need for any more acting. This is the revolver pressing against your back, senor. I could scarcely miss you at that distance."

They advanced in silence, through the faint gleam of light which illumined the passage through the stone slits over the cell doors.

The darkness swallowed them again, but the way was clear, and, once around the sharp turn, a glimmer of distant daylight made advance easier. There was no sign of any guard visible, nor any movement perceptible in the open vista beyond the save entrance. The girl touched Mendez' arm.

"You expect Lacy?"

"I have sent for him; it was yesterday."

"And he could be here now?"

"Not before night; it is a hard ride; why ask all this?"

"Hush, senoras. Now another thing; where are your men?"

His eyes wandered to the gleam of daylight.

"There will be one or two in the bunk-house likely; the others are with the cattle up the valley."

"But none in your cabin?"

He shook his head.

"And you say Lacy cannot get here before dark—not later?"

"Well, senorita, I may as well tell you, I suppose. It is the rule not to enter this valley after dark. I expect the Americanos to arrive about ten o'clock."

"The Americanos?"

"Si, there will be three in the party, one of them a man from New York, who has business with me."

Her clear, thoughtful eyes turned inquiringly toward Cavendish, but the survey brought with it no encouragement. The man meant well, no doubt, and would fight valiantly on occasion; he was no coward, no weakling—equally clear was not the stuff from which leaders are made. There was uncertainty in his eyes, a lack of force in his face which told the story. Whatever was decided upon, or accomplished, must be by her volition; she could trust him to obey, but that was all.

"Then we will make no attempt to leave the valley until after dark," she said slowly. "Even if we got away now, we would be pursued and overtaken, for the desert offers few chances for concealment. If we can reach that smaller cabin unseen we ought to be safe enough there for hours, Cateras will not bother, and with Mendez captive his men will not learn what has occurred. Is not this our best plan, Mr. Cavendish?"

"And at night?"

"We must work some scheme to get horses and depart before those others reach here. If we leave this man securely bound, his plight will not even be discovered until Lacy arrives. By that time, with any good fortune, we will be beyond pursuit, lost in the desert. Do you think of anything better?"

That he did not was evidenced by the vacant look in his eyes, and she waited for no answer.

"Here," she said, thrusting the revolver into his hand, "take this and guard Mendez until I return. It will only be a moment. Don't take your eyes off him; there must be no alarm."

She moved forward through the gloomy shadows toward the light showing at the mouth of the cave and was able to gain a comprehensive view of the entire scene beyond. Within the cave itself there was no movement, no evidence of life. Quite clearly no guard had been posted here, and no precautions taken, although doubtless the only entrance to the deep valley was carefully watched.

The two cabins were directly before the entrance, the smaller closely in against the cliff, the larger slightly advanced. Neither exhibited any sign of life. Her study of the situation concentrated on the small cabin immediately in front. It was built of logs, well mortised together and plastered between with clay. There were no windows on the end toward the cliff, or along the one side which she could see from where she was. A single door must open from the front, and apparently the house had been erected with the thought that it might some time be used for purposes of defense, as it had almost the appearance of a fort. Confident there could be no better time for the venture, Stella signaled with her hand for the others to join her.

"The way is clear," she said, "and, listen to my warning, senor. We are going straight along the north side of your cabin there, until we reach the door. For about twenty feet we shall be exposed to view from that other cabin, if any of your men are there. If you utter a sound, or make a motion, this man will shoot you dead in your tracks—do you understand?"

His look was ugly enough, although he compelled the thin lips to smile.

"Quite clearly—yes; but pardon me if I doubt. You might kill me; I think that yet how would it serve you? One shot fired would bring here a dozen men—then what?"

"I thank you, senor; there will be no shot fired. Give me the revolver, Mr. Cavendish; now take this knife. As we advance walk one step behind Mendez. You will know what to do. Now, senor, if I wish to try an experiment—we go now."

There was not a sound, not a word. Not unlike three shadows they crossed the open space, and found shelter behind the walls of the hut. The girl never removed her eyes from the other cabin, and Cavendish, a step behind his prisoner, poised for a quick blow, the steel blade glittering in uplifted hand, saw nothing but the back of the man before him. The latter shrugged his shoulders and marched forward, his eyes alone evidencing the passion raging within.

Without pausing they reached the door, which stood slightly ajar. Stella pushed it open, took one swift glance within, and stepped aside. The other two entered, and she instantly followed, closing the door, and securing it with a stout wooden bar. Her face was white, marked by nervous emotion, her eyes bright and fearless. With one swift glance she visioned the interior; there were two rooms, both small, divided by a solid log partition, pierced by a narrow doorway.

Her heart beat faster as she turned away, satisfied with the success of her plan. Nothing remained now but to secure Mendez, to make it impossible for him to raise an alarm. It he could be bound, and locked into that rear room. She looked at the two men—the Mexican had slouched down into a chair, apparently having abandoned all hope of escape, his chin lowered on his breast, his eyes hidden beneath the wide brim of his hat. Feeling no interdiction, she crossed toward the other room, noting as she passed that Mendez lifted his head to observe her movements. She paused at the door, turning suspiciously, but the man had already seemingly lost interest, and his head again drooped. She stepped within.

It was dingy dark once she had crossed the threshold, yet enough of light slickered in through the doorway to enable her to perceive the few articles of furniture. The room itself was a small one, but contained a roughly constructed wooden bed, two stools, and a square table of unplaned boards. Against the wall in a corner leaned a short-barreled gun, a canvas bag draped over its muzzle.

She had no opportunity to observe more. To her ears there came the sound of a blow in the room she had just left, a groan, the dull thud of a body striking the floor, accompanied by a Spanish oath, and a shuffling of feet. She sprang back into the open doorway, startled, certain only of some catastrophe, her fingers gripping hard on the revolver.

Cavendish lay writhing on the floor, the chair overturned beside him, and the Mexican, with one swift leap forward, cleared the body, and reached the window. Even as she caught this movement, too dazed for the instant to act, the injured man struggled up on one elbow, and, with all the force he possessed, hurled the knife straight at the fleeing figure. It flashed through the air, a savage gleam of steel, barely missing Mendez' shoulder, and buried itself in a log, quivering from the force of impact. With a yell of derision, his hands still bound, the desperate fugitive cast himself head-first through the opening. Without aim, scarcely aware of what she did, the girl flung up her weapon and fired. With revolver yet smoking she rushed forward to look without. Rolling over and over on the ground, his face covered with blood, Mendez was seeking to round the corner of the cabin, to get beyond range. Again she pulled the trigger, the powder smoke blowing back into her face, and blinding her. When she could see once more, he was gone, but men were leaping out through the door of the bunkhouse, shouting in excitement.

Aborigines of Labrador.

William Cabot journeyed from St. Augustine to Paradise rivers in 1920, and his almost annual visits to there have demonstrated that the ancient Indian aborigines of Labrador are rapidly approaching extinction. The high selling price of fur during the war lured the white trappers to penetrate even further than ever into the interior and so curtail the Indians' ground. The Indian will farm the valuable fur-bearing animals on the meagrest terrifity as carefully as a farmer his stock, while he will destroy all the caribou that he sees, though they are equally necessary to his life, since he depends on them for food. But he knows that the caribou is a vagrant, and that the white settler will shoot it if he does not. On lands that are common hunting grounds he has no reason to spare anything. Cabot, who better than any one knows these people from long personal acquaintance, living and traveling with them, and having helped to publish a book of their language, describes them as a very appealing race, friendly, peaceful, generous and real sportsmen — but doomed.

The native Eskimo and half-breed population were almost decimated in 1918 by a terrible epidemic of influenza. In one village of 300 people there were 200 deaths, and the individual of every adult male. In some white settlers' home every soul died in a few hours; and some, isolated and neglected, were killed by their own famished dogs and partly eaten; there being literally no one left to go to their assistance. The chief Moravian station on the Labrador, on its 150th anniversary, was destroyed by fire the very day after their steamer Harmony had landed all their winter supplies. Everything was destroyed, including the valuable fur catch of the year and the personal belongings of the missionaries. For the last 150 years the Moravians have been the champions of the Eskimo people.

War Wrecks.

There are nearly 5,000 ex-service men still in Canadian hospitals and that it is not expected this number will very materially decrease owing to the fact that approximately 3,000 of them are either mentally affected or suffering from tuberculosis and others practically incurable cases as a result of the great war. This statement was made by Major N. F. Parkinson, deputy minister of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment. Major Parkinson also stated that 56,000 ex-service men had completed courses of vocational training. There were also 70,000 pensions being paid at the present time to disabled ex-service men and to dependents.

AN EPOCH IN THE RAILWAY HISTORY OF CANADA

The recent appointment of Sir Henry Thornton as President of the Canadian National Railways, and his coming to Canada to take up the stupendous task of managing the greatest single railway system in the world, marks an epoch in the railway history of Canada.

Canada has adopted the policy of public ownership of thousands of miles of railway, which formerly comprised a number of separate systems, each under its own management, namely: the Canadian Northern, Grand Trunk Pacific and Grand Trunk Railway system, together with the Canadian Government Railways comprising the Intercolonial Railway, Prince Edward Island Railway and the National Transcontinental. On October 10, when the first meeting of the new Board of Directors was held at Toronto, these various systems were amalgamated into the consolidated system of Canadian National Railways, and all placed under one President and one Board of Directors.

In this far-flung system, the people of Canada not only own over 22,000 miles of railway lines, touching every important city and seaport in the Dominion, but also a telegraph and cable service reaching with its associated lines, 75,000 points in Canada, United States and Mexico; a fleet of merchant ships comprising the Canadian Government Merchant Marine, carrying Canadian products to all parts of the world; a fleet of modern passenger steamers operating up and down the Pacific coast, brighters and carriers on the Great Lakes; a chain of palatial hotels; the Canadian National Express Company, and other properties throughout the country. All this represents a very large investment from which the new President and Board of Directors believe Canada will eventually derive material benefit.

Sir Henry Thornton, the newly appointed President comes to Canada with an enviable record, having had wide experience in the financial world in directing the management and operation of various important railway systems in the United States, England and on the continent. But to make the National Railways a success the co-operation of the people of Canada is necessary, and it is the duty of every one Canadian to assist in making this property the national asset it should be.

Politics, at this time, should be of least to learn something of the early history and upbuilding of the road, we embraced in the Canadian National Railways. It must be remembered that it is less than a hundred years since the first stretch of railway in Canada was built.

In 1837, a charter was granted to the company of the Champlain and St. Lawrence Railroad for a portage road 16 miles long from La Prairie on the St. Lawrence to St. Johns on the Richelieu, to facilitate the handling of traffic between Montreal and New York. In 1836, this line was opened for traffic. The rails, unlike the solid steel ones of today, were of wood, with strap iron on the upper surface, and the crudely constructed coaches were drawn by horses.

In 1837 the proprietors imported an engine and engineer, the first to be used in Canada, a rakish little engine that rattled along at less than twenty miles an hour.

In 1842, it was decided to build a road from Montreal to Lachine to replace the earlier stage route around the rapids. These pioneer roads, the first connecting Montreal with the outer world, were some twenty years later absorbed by the Grand Trunk System.

In 1847 the rails were extended to St. Lambert opposite Montreal, and southward to Rouse's Point, on Lake Champlain. While this considerably shortened the trip to New York, it was still an easy journey, entailing two changes—first, the trip across the river by ferry to St. Lambert, thence by steamer to Lake Champlain, and a second change to the boat going southward down Lake Champlain and the Hudson River. In this year the act to incorporate the Grand Trunk of Canada was passed and construction commenced.

By this time interest in the new method of travel had amounted to a railway mania, and companies sprang up frantically over night, applying for charters to build roads here and there, mostly for short distances, in the Maritimes, Quebec and Ontario. At that time the great north-west was known to the fur-traders alone, and perhaps a few missionaries.

Dozens of charters were granted in the fifties, but the next pioneer road to be completed also drew its traffic largely from Montreal. That was the St. Lawrence and Atlantic, opened in 1853 between Longeuil, opposite Montreal, and Portland, Maine.

In 1854, several projects that had been entered into by the Grand Trunk were amalgamated by Act of Parliament. In this year the line from Quebec to Richmond was opened, linking Montreal with the ocean as well as the south. In 1855 the line from Montreal to Brockville was opened. By the end of the following year the steel was extended from Brockville to Toronto, and on westward to Sarnia. Building was also going ahead to the eastward, extending as far as Rivière du Loup, making a total of 872 miles under Grand Trunk management in 1860. The total mileage in Canada at this time was 1,880 miles.

Prior to 1847, no railroads had been built in the Maritime Provinces, except a coal tramway in Nova Scotia from the Albion "coal mines to tide water. But in 1847 the line from Halifax to Truro was completed and by 1867 extended to Pictou Landing, while in New Brunswick St. John and Shediac had been established. Surveys had also been made for a line to continue from Truro to connect the Maritimes with the other provinces, but nothing was done until after Confederation in 1867, when the building of this connecting link was made a condition of entrance into the confederation. The Dominion Government undertook the task, and by 1876 the 500 miles between Truro and Rivière du Loup were opened for traffic throughout. The line from Halifax to Truro and several other lines in the Maritimes had been purchased by the federal government, and the entire system was called the Intercolonial Railway. Three years later the federal government purchased a line from Rivière du Loup to Point Lévis from the G.T.R. In 1898, the government purchased the Drummond County Railway, Chaudière to Ste. Rosalie, and made arrangements with the G.T.R. for joint usage of their line from Ste. Rosalie to Montreal.

In the meantime the Grand Trunk Railway, by extension and acquisition had covered the Province of Ontario with a network of lines, and had in 1882 absorbed the Great Western Railway. It had also extended its main line to Chicago, the great traffic centre of the continent.

Following the development of Western Canada, the management of the Grand Trunk Railway System conceived the idea of constructing a new transcontinental line from coast to coast. It was to extend through the fertile timber lands of northern Quebec and Ontario to Winnipeg, on westward through the great prairie provinces, through Yellowhead Pass and a practically unexplored mountain kingdom of the Canadian Rockies, following along the central valleys of British Columbia to Prince Rupert.

In 1903 the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway and the Dominion Government agreed to co-operate on this transcontinental line and to build it in two grand divisions. The western division to be known as the Grand Trunk Pacific, extending from Winnipeg to Prince Rupert, and comprising a mileage of 1,735 miles, to be built by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. The eastern division, comprising 1,804 miles east of Winnipeg to be built by the Canadian Government under the supervision of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, and leased to the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway for a period of fifty years. So that, by 1914, the Grand Trunk and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway together comprised over 7,500 miles of rails; operated boats on the Pacific coast between Seattle, Vancouver, Victoria, Prince Rupert and Alaska ports; huge grain elevators at various important lake, water and lake terminals, and a chain of splendid hotels.

Out in the Province of Manitoba, through a rich and extremely settled section, in 1896, appeared the rails of a hundred mile stretch of road which was to be known as the first of the transcontinental line of the Canadian Northern Railway. Its birth took place in an adjacious born, for news of the wonderful fertility of the vast Canadian west, with its free grants of land, had spread practically around the world, and a great tide of immigration was rolling into the country. From Great Britain, Europe and the United States a constant stream of settlers came; towns sprang up over night, as it were; settlers clamored for railways; the line spread as if by magic, westward to Winnipeg and eastward to Port Arthur at the head of lake navigation. But the lines of the Northern Pacific Railway in Manitoba were acquired, giving control through a rich and great rail arteries of the Western States, so that in 1901, the Canadian Northern had 975 miles of rails under its control. The steel soon crept up the rich, fertile valley of the North Saskatchewan River to Edmonton. Lines were acquired in the eastern part of Canada and linked together, and by 1905 the Canadian Northern system extended to approximately 2,836 miles. In the next five years the mileage was almost doubled. By 1915 the line had crept westward to Edmonton, pierced the Rockies and proceeded down the Fraser Valley to Vancouver, on the Pacific Coast. At the same time it acquired and extended lines of the east, so that its total mileage for that year amounted to 9,362 miles.

The outbreak of war, and its effects on finance, resulted in a condition which compelled the Government to take over these component parts now forming the Canadian National Railways, but in the past two years the Grand Trunk and the Canadian National Railways, while forming a co-ordinated system, have been under its own board of management. The appointment of Sir Henry Thornton and the new Board of Directors marks the beginning of the complete amalgamation under one President and one Board of Management.

In the past two years there was a substantial reduction in the deficit of the National lines and there is every reason to believe that the coming year will see this deficit further reduced. It is the aim of the new management to make the Canadian National Railways service conform to such a high standard that it will merit the confidence and support of the Canadian people.

THE FALL SKIRTS

Long and Short Effect Combined in Latest Garment.

Two-Material Outfits Promise to Be in Limelight; Contrast to Develop the Trimming.

Out of the mixture of the newer fashions that are being presented to the public as advance models, says a fashion authority in the New York Times, we glean the following leading facts which are pertinent to the development of the fall fashions and which will be more than useful to any one who has to have her clothes designed at the present time.

Long skirts there will be beyond the shadow of any doubt, but they can have intersticos of short spaces incorporated in their making so that, at one point they will be quite short while at exactly the opposite points they will fairly be trailing on the ground.

Many of the fall dresses will be made up on a combination of two materials, say, velvet and silk, or velvet and wool or silk and wool or silk and fur fabric, or velvet and real fur. When this is the case there will be little or no extraneous trimming and the contrast of the two fabrics will be used to develop the trimming interest of the gown.

Waistlines will be long—well over the hips—and they will at this point be adorned with trimmings of beads or twisted ribbons or velvets made into rolls or any other sash material which happens to harmonize with the general interests of the gown itself.

The neckline will, in all cases, be as plain as possible, the batteau line being the one which is most favored from among them all. At this point there will be absolutely no trimming but the line of the gown left entirely plain will be left to hold the honors for the costume at that point.

Sleeves will be wide and long. They will be embroidered heavily and often the embroidery applied at this point will be the only sign of trimming in that direction. There will be the whole plain gown which is embroidered in many startling and vivid colors over the sleeve ends and which will have the rest of its surface clothing but a plain color and a chaste line to make it famous.

Girdles and sashes will be very much a feature of the modern gown. They will be colorful in themselves and even when the gown itself is sombre in its expression the girdles will serve to add some hint of a vividness of expression.

WIDER RIBBONS FOR GIRDLES

Strands Resemble Strips of Metal Brocade; Excellent Means of Doing Over Old Dresses.

Ribbons of more width are used for twisted girdles and for panels at the sides of skirts. They look like strips of metal brocade, and really that is what they are, though woven in ribbon widths. In some instances a whole bodice is made of this metal or plain braided ribbon and one interesting gown had the draped bodice running off into a sash that tied in a big bow at one side of the back and fell in a long train over the silver-cloth underskirt.

This is an excellent means of doing over old dresses, for a bit of new ribbon added to the old foundation does wonders in the way of freshening a frock to face a new season's wear. Another way to resort to a good deal of cleverness in the way of making over, for the gowns of last winter are going to look a trifle scant when slipped on their biting places. However, no discouragement is necessary, until one has considered ways and means of bringing them up to date and making them look like something designed especially according to the last word of fashion.

"TAM" IS OF TAUPE DUVETYN

This fascinating "tam" is of taupe duvetyn, with attractive embroidery in brilliant coloring.

Sweater Belts.

Narrow, colored leather belts will be much in evidence this autumn replacing the white belts that have been favorites through the summer.

For Autumn Golf.

A stunning suit intended for wear on the autumn golf links is of yellow and white perilaine. The coat, which comes to the hips, is in bright yellow. A shade lighter and softer than the dent de lion of spring. Made with a high, standing collar of seal, the coat has military stripings of white around the cuffs. The skirt is white, with a triple row of narrow stripes in yellow around the hem and up the left side

DRESS OR OUTDOOR COSTUME

What could be more charming than this knitted costume, either as a dress or an outdoor suit? The choker is a new note from fashion's page, as is the simplicity of the costume as a whole.

The black gown always claims its right to recognition, and crepe is the leading material. Of course the skirt must be of uneven length and the bodice plain. This model is attractive.

JACKET BLOUSE IS WELCOME

Garment Will Help Out Milady's Wardrobe; Suitable for Women With Slender Lines.

The jacket blouse is new and something that is going to be welcomed by a lot of women as a means of helping out their wardrobe. The idea started in Paris, where all through the spring and summer they were worn with skirts and waists in different colorings. This is a fashion which should be confined to women with long, slender lines, because on any more robust figures it is quite an unhappy thing to break the line of waist and skirt. However, there are many tall, thin figures in the world and they will look lovely in the jacket blouse.

It is, really, a blouse with a long waistline and a tight, rather wide band about the hips. It is made with a low, rolled collar or with a high one that buttons under the chin, and its material is some heavy colorful fabric suitable to the street, with a covering coat, that makes it a sort of coat in itself—hence its name, the jacket blouse. The favorite material for this kind of blouse is a fabric called matinesse. It has a rather thick, almost quilted, silk surface and over all an embroidered design.

These outer blouses are often worn with plaited skirts of black satin or crepe, and they are desirable, too, with the lighter weight woolen materials. They will naturally grow more in favor as the cooler days approach, for they are essentially the thing to wear before one needs to don a top coat of any great warmth or weight. They are at their loveliest when more or less brightly colored. There is one sort in black and white which is very effective, the embroidery done in black on a white ground. There is another done in dull tones of red on a background of black. The red ones are extremely good looking and there are others which will thrill those who naturally like to wear costumes of this sort.

FANS ARE GOOD FOR EVENING

Accessory Comes in All Sorts of New Colors; Some of Feathers and Some of Gauze.

Fans are still good for evening, and they are coming in all sorts of new and lovely colors, either made of feathers of some kind or of gauze that is painted in many bright colors. For the simple draped evening gowns, of one flat color and no trimming, a fan is almost an indispensable quantity. It can be used to bring out the color and character of the gown and besides all this it helps to give grace to your figure by providing your arm an excuse to wave about in the air, there by breaking the continuity of that straight up-and-down line. There are little fans of silver and gilt gauze which are most attractive. They are especially lovely with black velvet draped dinner dresses, where a larger fan might possibly be in the way.

Bracelets of strings of jewels are also lovely for wear with the simpler sorts of evening clothes, and when one carries a fan, the arm with jangling bracelets on it is even prettier than it would be the arm that is totally unadorned.

Another accessory pertinent to the modern clothes is the pendant to hang about one's neck. The smarter ones are strung on narrow ribbons or cords or on silver and platinum threads. But the pendants themselves are apt to be extraordinarily colorful and often they are very exquisitely carved. There are those of jade in green and there are those of amber ones and then there are those of ivory and some medallions of filagree silver and gold. Many of the handsomer ones are made of diamonds set in black enamel or in gold and platinum.

LARGE HATS ARE INDICATED

Newest Models Pave Way for Mushroom Fashions; Paris Gives Up Off-the-Face Type.

Just now hats come in for a big share of interest. The late summer trend in Paris has much to do with the defining of the trend for fall. If this works out as the newest models indicate, mushrooms and large hats will hold the field. Paris has long since given up the off-the-face model in favor of the more protective mushroom.

Very large hats will be very smart, and in direct contrast comes the chic little model which Parisians are indorsing for afternoon wear and for evening.

These are to be worn as theater hats, when one's attire is informal enough to admit of a hat. Very close fitting they are, just about the size of the head, and they are worked out in the gayest possible colors. Rich metal cloths and embroideries are the favored mediums.

An item of note that comes to us from the Grand Prix races is the return of the becoming trieorn. For the woman who can wear these interesting three-cornered shapes they are decidedly chic and becoming. For added smartness, one may add a becoming lace veil.

THE STOUT WOMAN'S GOWNS

Dresses for the Party Matrons Are Still Cut With the Low Waistline.

Dresses designed for stout figures are still cut with the low waistline, and both panels and side drapery are employed to relieve the skirt of its otherwise plain appearance. The overlapping side, caught up at the side front with double clasps or cabochons, is newer than the panels, which, however, are by no means out of favor.

The stout woman has always worn her skirts quite long and therefore not much change in the length is noted.

Moderately large sleeves are advocated for stout women, as a tight sleeve emphasizes the circumference of an abnormally sized arm, and where artistic effect is aimed at cord or very slender string girdles are used rather than crushed belt or sash.

The neck outline is round, square or pointed, according to taste. But fashion gives the preference to round necks as there they are becoming. The same materials are used for large sizes as for the normal, and dark colors such as black, navy and the warmer, richer tones of brown are shown chiefly.

Wedding at Deseronto.

At St. Vincent De Paul's church at eight o'clock Saturday morning, a quiet but very pretty wedding was solemnized when Miss Bernadetta Hill became the bride of Mr. William Wilson, both well and favorably known residents of Deseronto, the Rev. Fr. O'Reilly officiating. The bride entered the church pleasingly gowned in a tailored suit of brown lavette, leaning on the arm of her uncle, Mr. A. C. Finn, Enterprise, to the strains of the nuptial march played by Miss Ready, Deseronto. During the mass Miss Sullivan rendered several appropriate solos, one being, particularly worthy of mention, the hymn to St. Joseph. Miss Lauretta Finn, cousin of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, while Mr. Edmund Dowling performed the duties of best man. After the impressive ceremony and receiving the congratulations of numerous relatives and friends the bridal party, accompanied by Rev. Fr. O'Reilly, motored to the home of the bride on East Main street, where a sumptuous wedding breakfast awaited them. The bride and groom received many useful and costly presents, among them being a beautiful present from the bride's brother-in-law, Mr. T. H. Whealen, Vancouver, B.C. In the afternoon the couple were motored to Napanee, where they boarded the 3.30 p.m. C.N.R. train for Ottawa, Montreal and St. Anne de Beaupre, amid showers of rice, confetti and good wishes. They will be at home to their many friends at the East Main street residence after December 18th.

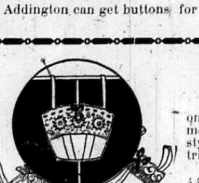
UNCLE WIGGILY WRITES A LETTER TO ALL THE BOYS AND GIRLS IN NAPANEE AND TO ALL THEIR COUSINS IN THE COUNTRY



DEAR FRIENDS :

No doubt you have been reading about Santa Claus being at the stores in the big city of Toronto. That's right, he has been there and all the boys and girls have had the pleasure of seeing him. They have told him what they want for Xmas. Now you know that time is short and Santa Claus will be a very busy man from now until Xmas. He is coming your way and I will bet my swallow-tailed coat that he will be at your place on Xmas Eve.

I know that every boy and girl loves toys and games, picture books and dolls, so why not do the next best thing and write Santa Claus a letter ? If you write to him in care of The Robinson Co., Limited, Napanee, I am sure he will get your letter. You see this big store is an agent for old Santa Claus and they have hundreds of dollars worth of his merchandise right here in their store at Napanee. Now I am only a rabbit, but the toy-manager has sent me in charge of a big table of lovely dolls. They are the finest that I have ever seen. Some of these dolls are as big as I am, they have lovely curly hair, pretty blue eyes and all are dressed with the prettiest dresses you ever saw. Then some of the real society dolls have lovely kid slippers with gorgeous buckles. Other dolls have wonderful hats.

Over on another table is a great assortment of trains. Most of them have engines that you wind up and then run on tracks and pull cars behind them. One great big fellow runs by electricity. It stops at all the stations, runs through tunnels and over switches.

Then too, you want to see the dozens of picture books that are here. Books with wonderful stories and bright colored pictures that will make you laugh all day long. Then, there are books for big brothers and big sisters, books for mother and books for dad.

If you want to decorate your Xmas tree you must choose some of the beautiful decorations, such as electric lights, bright tinsel ornaments, colored fruits, candles snow and icicles.

The games are most interesting this Xmas. Bang Bird is awfully funny and is one of the best. The African Dodger is here again and is just as black as ever, ten pins and the bowling alley makes heaps of fun, then there are checkers, puzzles and card games galore.

For big boys there are hockey sticks, sleighs, shovels and guns, while you girls will surely like this very fine line of doll carriages. You can get them in any size you like. Some have reed bodies, others have wood bodies with reed hoods, others are made from leatherette. All are nicely decorated and painted.

Now friends, this is a long letter and I have only just started to tell you about all the wonderful things that are here. But come and see for yourself. Everything is neatly displayed on large tables and so long as you are good you are perfectly welcome.

Hoping to see you soon, I remain

Yours for a good-time Xmas,
UNCLE WIGGILY.
